Placid people at work Taking

By KATHRYN FLETCHER
LPN staff writer

Catering to the whims of Lake Placid's population is part of her job, but Paula Vincent doesn't feel that driving a taxi is a job at all.

When she was working two years ago as a certified nurse's assistant, she decided to take on another part-time job. One income just wasn't making it since she was a single mom with three children.

"I love to drive so I figured I'd put two and two together," Vincent explained.

Her entrance into the job was easy because she was used to taking care of people.

"I love people, so it was easy," Vincent said.

A typical day driving a taxi includes many time calls for the regular customers. Vincent explained that a time call is a pick-up that is regularly set for a specific time. Some customers who don't have transportation need a ride to work at a certain time each day, so those are dispersed throughout a taxi driver's shift.

Rothmans Citizen

By KATHRYN FLETCHER
LPN staff writer

Two citizens of the year in Wilmington were announced recently and a husband and wife team were presented with the honor.

It was announced at the Annual Newcomers Dinner on March 5 that Arnold and Barbara Rothman are the Citizens of the Year for 1996.

The award was only begun a few years ago and hasn't developed into anything formal yet, Barbara explained, but she and her husband were awarded plaques for their "many acts of kindness and service" to the community this year.

"I was very surprised and honored," she commented.

Barthman had known her husband was getting the award, so she sat at the dinner full of anticipation because Arnold knew nothing about it, she said. When the name was announced she was completely surprised.

Philip Barthman, one of the vice presidents on the Board of Directors of the Whiteface Regional Volunteer Council, which sponsors the dinner, was in charge of the award which celebrated the couple.

"It was a lot for the community," he said.
